

Featured

As you may know, Naked Madrid has been around for quite some time. We're one of the first English-language Madrid blogs to be up and still running. And it's thanks to a large community of local writers and followers that our site is packed with tips, stories and recs to help you make the most of this incredible city.

Here are a few of the recent recognitions that we've received on travel sites, fellow Madrid blogs and local newspapers:

1. Trip Duck

We ranked number one on Trip Duck's 2020 edition of 50+ Best Madrid Blogs and Websites You Should Know About, along with sites we admire like Madrid No Frills by Leah Pattem, Spain Revealed by James Blick and Spanish Sabores by Lauren Aloise. Check out their extensive list for more great Madrid blogs to follow, plus tons of articles.

2. Spotted by Locals

We were also mentioned on Spotted by Local's list of Best Madrid Blogs 2020 – As Selected by Locals! Again, along with our favorites mentioned above. Make sure to check out Spotted by Locals for insider tips in over 80 cities around the world!

3. The Local

One of Spain's top English-language newspapers, The Local, picked up our story on creating the Lockdown Diaries series during Madrid's strict quarantine in March, April and May 2020. Editor Daphne Binioris and writer Daniel Catalan collected stories from people going through lockdown – spanning from doctors and firefighters to teachers and journalists – in a simple Q&A format. The series became widely read. You can read the feature here!

If you'd like to contribute to Naked Madrid or get in touch with us, please email Daphne Binioris: daphne@veracontent.com